

We have all heard much evidence proving the incredibly negative impact of allowing media giants to use their money to control the amount and type of information that the public receives. As America becomes more diverse, there will be more voices to be heard, and those voices will be silenced by corporate bias and financially based "facts". What I still can't understand is what the benefits are to anyone other than those that financially gain from these deals. I think the public has the right to know the truth about why this issue has gotten as far as it has...there needs to be MORE regulation, not less by the FCC.
